Two New Members for RCPC Board

RCPC is pleased to announce the appointment of Jennifer Daskal and Kevin Faughnan to fill the two current board of directors vacancies. Meet them at the January 16, 2014 Town Hall meeting.

Jennifer Daskal

I enjoy working with the public, listening to the needs of the community and problem solving. My family has enjoyed the community of Rockridge and Oakland in general since moving to the area and I want to give back.

Kevin Faughnan

College Avenue was a fairly empty and unattractive area in 1975. I know lots of people have added to what it is now-and what we enjoy as residents. The area has its share of problems to solve, and I want to be part of those solutions.

2013 On the Way Out: What Have 'Ya Done for Me Lately?

The RCPC Mission Statement

- Preserve and enhance the unique character of the Rockridge neighborhood of Oakland, California;
- Promote the health, safety, and quality of life of its residents;
- Furnish a forum for community involvement;
- Provide leadership and representation of neighborhood interests

In fulfillment of its mission statement, the Rockridge Community Planning Council (RCPC) presents up to 10 public Town Hall meetings each year, reviews and comments to the city on development and business proposals, and meets with adjoining and nearby neighborhood associations to share concerns and interests.

Throughout, the RCPC board strives to communicate its activities to the community – and to get community response – via the Town Halls and its sponsorship ▶ RCPC in 2013, page 13

Notes: November RCPC Town Hall on Neighborhood Watch Groups

by Zabrae Valentine, chair, RCPC

We hope November's RCPC Town Hall spurs you to action! The audience heard a panel of local residents who are part of active Neighborhood Watch groups and other public safety efforts share ideas about how Rockridge neighbors can make our streets safer. The discussion was moderated by Rockridge resident Allie

Rasmus of KTVU News, panelists included David Lorie, Andy Young, Frank Castro, and Don Link. OPD's Capt. Anthony Toribio and Lt. Chris Bolton and Neighborhood Services Coordinator Patricia Rose were also present to answer questions. Here were the primary "takeaways":

What matters most of all is simply getting to know your neighbors and being able to reach

Public Safety, Not Private Security

by Laura Counts, Nicole Aruda and Susette Min

It's fair to say that everyone—whether living in Rockridge or any other neighborhood—wants to feel safe. But not everyone believes the recent hiring of private security makes our community safer. In fact, no one has presented any empirical evidence that it does.

Some Rockridge residents are organizing to find other ways to reduce crime.

“Just because we're worried about private security doesn't mean we aren't concerned about public safety,” says Irene Yen, a 20-year North Oakland resident. “There are many alternatives, and we want to include as many people as possible in the discussion.”

For those who missed the news, guards from VMA Security are now patrolling at least two North Oakland areas, hired by groups of residents through online “crowdfunding.” The organizers launched the campaigns and then let the community know, rather than seeking input first. Not to doubt their good intentions, but to many people this felt profoundly undemocratic.

Organizers say 20 percent of the neighborhood funded the VMA guards, but we couldn't verify that claim through census data. There are 2,655 households in the Lower Rockridge South/West crowdfunding zone (Census Tract #4003), and 281 people contributed. That represents about 11 percent of households. In Lower Rockridge North/West, 226 people contributed—about 12 percent of the 1,911 households. It's unknown how many went on to sign contracts with VMA.

It seems that a small number of people have made a decision that makes many feel less safe, has the potential to escalate class and racial tensions, and fails to address the core issues behind this recent crime wave.

“This sets an ugly precedent for our community by privatizing a most basic civic function,” says North Oakland resident Kristy Guevara-Flanagan. “I'm also concerned that the potential for racial profiling by outside security guards could affect children and youth.”

We've spoken to many neighbors who are unhappy about the patrols but hesitant to speak up, given how divisive the discussions have been on local listservs and blogs. Many others, including longtime residents not tapped into online discussions, don't even know about the patrols.

There are many unanswered questions about how this experiment will work. For example, it's unclear whether the guards will remain unarmed in the future, and, if they do carry weapons, how organizers will let the broader community know. There's also the question of what actions guards might take. Many of the scariest recent crimes are armed robberies on city streets—crimes police say are largely driven by the cash market for stolen electronic gadgets. But public streets are supposedly outside the scope of VMA's work.

Organizers say the guards will only patrol streets with paying clients, so it's uncertain what VMA will do if they witness a crime in progress, or spot someone they consider to be acting “suspiciously” near a client's property.

“Can they stop me and ask what I'm doing?” asked one 40-year resident who is active in the neighborhood. He said he's worried about being profiled, and is even more concerned for his grandchildren (he didn't want to put his name out publicly). “This doesn't make me feel safe. Are they keeping the neighborhood safe, or are they

by Stuart Flashman, RCPC Land Use Committee chair

■ College Avenue Safeway College & Claremont Avenues

At a two-and-a-half hour negotiating session on November 1, Safeway representatives (led by Corporate Vice President for Real Estate Steve Berndt), and the three community groups – Rockridge Community Planning Council (RCPC), Friends and Neighbors of College Avenue (FANS), and Berkeleyans for Pedestrian Oriented Development (BPOD) – hashed out a compromise agreement over Safeway’s increasing the height of its new College Avenue store. The final height is still 2-½ feet taller than shown in plans the city approved last December, but the community groups achieved a number of concessions to compensate for the additional visual impacts. Since then, things bogged down, with Safeway’s attorneys inserting provisions not agreed to and omitting things that were. Hopefully, the agreement will be finalized soon.

Construction has been stalled until the negotiations are completed; it’s now going to be a race between Safeway’s construction crews and the serious winter rains. Once the foundation is completed, construction can continue regardless of the weather. Otherwise, the work could remain stalled until spring.

■ Rockridge Shopping Center [Safeway] Broadway & Pleasant Valley

When the local community groups and Safeway reached agreement over plans for the Rockridge Shopping Center redevelopment project, everyone assumed that the controversy was over. Now, a previously-unknown group has filed suit against Safeway to block the project. The group’s nature and motive remain unclear, but the suit is unlikely to take long to resolve. When the project was approved by the Planning Commission, nobody appealed that decision to the city Council. The failure to take the issues to the Council (as RCPC did last year for the College Avenue Safeway project) practically guarantees that the lawsuit will be dismissed for “failure to exhaust administrative remedies.” This will likely happen some time in the next month or two. Demolition and construction might then begin.

■ Bourbon & Beef Restaurant 5634 College Avenue

In November, The Rockridge News reported that complaints from this new restaurant’s upstairs neighboring tenants would be resolved by the restaurant’s owners. However, problems have continued. RCPC is being asked to intervene and try to resolve the continuing problems. Failing that, it may be necessary to contact the City Manager’s staff to seek nuisance abatement (which ended up closing down Bourbon & Beef’s predecessor, Water).

■ Bica Coffee Shop 5701 College Avenue

We reported in November that Bica planned to apply for full-service restaurant use permit. City staff has since concluded that a restaurant use permit had already been issued for this location some time in the past. Oakland’s zoning ordinance (unlike in most cities) makes use permits permanent, with no expiration date. Thus, Bica is being

Put FROG Park Swings on Your Year-End Giving List

With your help, FROG Park will be home to new toddler swings, regular swings, climbing merry-go-round and more (highest rated features for those who took the survey). After extensive public comment this fall, and meetings with the city of Oakland, we’re moving ahead with new swings and play features in 2014; but we need your support.

To make the vision of an enhanced FROG Park a reality, we need to raise $20,000 from the community. And just in time for the holidays, a mystery donor has given $5,000 towards a match. Please donate now to ensure we receive that money.

For more than a decade, FROG Park has been a second home for area children – for playdates, birthday parties, field trips, and get-out-the-energy excursions. It’s been a part of your family’s life. Now it’s time to make FROG a part of your year-end giving.

Thank you for your generosity.

Several new public trash receptacles were added along southern Claremont Avenue last month thanks to Scenic Streets, the group leading landscaping renovation of the area.

The city placed the sidewalk cans in three litter hot-spots along the street: the corner of Clifton, the corner of Hudson and mid-block near the underpass “Oceanus” mural.

City Approves Chabot School & Recreation Center Tree Plantings

The Lorax Project's Goal: Plant Trees, Keep Air Clean for Kids

by Jon Welch

As part of its settlement with Caltrans, the Fourth Bore Coalition proposed planting trees along Highway 24 to mitigate the effect of the newly expanded Caldecott Tunnel. Caltrans balked.

"We picked up where the Caldecott Settlement ended," said Rich Proulx, director of the Lorax Project, a local tree planting initiative. "We addressed the concerns raised during the negotiations. We even offered to adopt a highway so we could plant trees on the Caltrans land along Highway 24. After years of trying, it was clear that the tree planting would never be permitted."

The Lorax Project received a second wind from the city of Oakland when it recently obtained approval to plant redwood trees along the southern edge of the Chabot Recreation Center area and Chabot Elementary School. The Lorax Project also plans to offer trees to residents on Miles Avenue.

A 2003 California law banned new school construction within 500 feet of any major freeway. Legislators reviewed the scientific evidence and determined that the health risks for children attending schools located so close to freeways were unacceptable, so new schools are not exposed to the conditions faced by Chabot Elementary School and nearby Claremont Middle School, whose campuses are entirely within 500 feet of Highway 24.

Scientific research has established the negative health consequences of exposure to pollution for people who live, work, or attend schools near major freeways. Exposure to pollution among children living or attending schools near freeways is known to increase risks of asthma, allergies, bronchitis, other respiratory problems, and impaired lung function growth. Of particular concern for schools and parks in such locations is that children's lungs are fragile and developing. Current research shows that repeated exposure to freeway pollution can result in critical long-term consequences, including compromised adult lung functioning, lung disease, heart disease, and cancer.

Two years ago, Claremont Middle School planted rows of redwood trees along the side of the campus grounds adjacent to the highway to help mitigate this danger. Studies have shown that trees located near highways can serve as barriers that significantly reduce the transmission of pollutants through the air.

"The fact that the Lorax Project can help to reduce particulates in the air and make it healthier for our children is wonderful," stated Laura Burnett, Chabot Elementary School PTA president. "It has been a continual concern that Chabot Elementary School is so close to a freeway and so the particulate matter is especially high. Currently, it's at unhealthy conditions. Between the enhanced beauty and better air quality for our children, we couldn't be happier." Jon Mayer, Chabot Elementary principal, added, "It cannot hurt to have more trees around our site. Having more trees is great protection and can only clean the air up."

The success of the Lorax Project is not assured. Proulx warned, "We have taken a big step forward, but our agreement with the city gives us only a short time to plant trees. While we would love to plant 100 new trees, we are completely dependent on funding from the local community. We can use all the help we can get."

For more information about the Lorax Project, contact Rich Proulx, The Lorax Project, 46 Roanoke Road, Berkeley, CA 94705; richproulx@lyceuminstitute.org or call 415/637-5890.

City Solicits Comments on Newest Caldecott List

As reported in the October 2013 issue of The Rockridge News, Oakland staff and consultants are well into designing many of the highest-ranking projects on the Caldecott Settlement project list. As detailed design of construction plans has unfolded, cost estimates have grown from the initial costs used to develop the list, in some cases significantly. The result is that fewer projects on the list will be funded than originally anticipated.

At the October 17 RCPC Town Hall meeting and via a letter e-mailed to over 200 affected residents, city staff described the current status of the project list and corresponding costs and outlined potential cost-cutting options. The four projects for which adjustments have been publicly suggested are:

Project #1 (Tunnel Rd/SR-13/Hiller Dr intersection improvements). The estimated cost of this project has risen from $950,000 to over $1.5 million. Meanwhile, the city of Berkeley has submitted plans to Caltrans for a new pedestrian-activated traffic signal on Tunnel Road at The Uplands and Caltrans has committed to clearing all sidewalk obstructions and rebuilding the missing section of sidewalk on the east/north side of Tunnel Road between Hiller Drive and Vicente Road. These planned and funded improvements will give pedestrians continuous access between the hills and west/south of Tunnel Road. Some say this renders the $680,000 sidewalk component currently included in this project redundant, although some still argue for keeping the sidewalk as per the original plan. Staff will be reviewing plans to reduce cost and scope while still adhering to the original intent of the project.

Project #6 (Jogging/walking path on Broadway between Golden Gate and Lake Temescal). After closer investigation, city engineering staff has determined that the project's retaining walls are not needed, and disturbing the existing jogging path could make it more prone to damage from storm water runoff. Instead, staff recommends that Caltrans, neighbors and the city work together to better maintain the area by cleaning the drainage ditch and pruning trees along the pathway. These activities are not eligible for Caldecott funds.

Projects #7-8 (SR-24 Noise Barrier Scope Summary Reports). Since original costs were estimated, the city has learned that Caltrans procedures have changed, causing the studies' costs to rise by $300,000. Furthermore, funding for soundwall construction will be extremely difficult or impossible to come by. A petition process is underway to make a determination on whether or not these studies will proceed.

Staff and their consultants are in the process of reviewing all comments received during the October 17-December 6 comment period to determine if any project changes are in order and if additional meetings are necessary.

For more information, contact the city's Caldecott projects consultant, Victoria Eisen, at victoria@eisenletunic.com or 510/525-0220.

Broadway Road Diet Discussed at Community Meeting

City staff presented proposed designs for the Upper Broadway "road diet" and related intersection improvements at a public meeting held in mid-November at College Preparatory School.

This project includes components that will be funded through the Caldecott Settlement Agreement – including a pedestrian-activated traffic signal at Lawton and corner bulb-outs to reduce the speed of vehicles turning from Broadway onto Ocean View and Lawton – as well as a number of improvements to be funded through roadway resurfacing and other funds. These components include:

- Resurfacing the roadway
- Reducing the number of traffic lanes from 4 to 3 (1 lane in each direction, with a two-way center turn lane)
- Adding bicycle lanes on both sides of the street
- Adding high-visibility crosswalks
- Keeping existing on-street parking
- Bulb-outs and high-visibility crosswalks at Taft Avenue, Kales Avenue and Ada Street

Support was expressed for these improvements at the meeting, as well as concern that the lane reconfiguration may increase congestion on Broadway during commute periods.

This effort will be the subject of a future public meeting. Construction is expected in 2015.

Eyes on Rockridge

Parents Give Second Look to Claremont Middle School

by Judith Doner Berne

Although Oakland Unified School District (OUSD) is a “Schools of Choice” district, Rockridge parents have readily sent their children to the neighborhood elementary schools and, perhaps to a lesser degree, Oakland Technical High School.

Claremont, our neighborhood middle school, has been seen as the weak link, with parents often enrolling their sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders in other public, charter, private or parochial middle schools.

So last year’s appointment of Reginald and Ronald Richardson as the new Claremont co-principals was hailed as an opportunity to improve instruction and atmosphere and provide stability, both in teaching staff and at the top.

Determined to stop the siphoning of students from its feeder schools – Chabot, Peralta, Emerson and Piedmont Avenue – the Richardsons told me in an interview following their appointment: “We will be really showing our faces at those elementaries.”

This year, Claremont enrollment shot up 45 percent – from 335 to 487 – seemingly buoyed by the new principals, pro-active parents and somewhat higher test scores. Forty-two sixth-graders from Chabot reportedly led that surge, up from 25 the year before. Lesser numbers came from Emerson (21), Peralta (18) and Piedmont (12).

I attended the Richardsons’ “Claremont Update” at the Peralta Parent Teacher Group’s November meeting. “We have a personal commitment,” Reggie told the audience of about 30. “Our mom went to Peralta; our uncle and mom went to Claremont.”

“Our framework is social justice, and moving away from traditional teaching and discipline to more of a humanistic approach,” Ronald said. “And yes: We have challenges.” These include students coming to school late, a lack of resources and the ability to retain teachers.

“We did retain 90 percent of our teachers this year,” Reggie said. But due to the enrollment increase, five new teachers had to be added, vetted and hired after school had started. “That impacted our students,” he said.

They say it shouldn’t happen again. And they point to strengthened academics, individually differentiated instruction, increased support for teachers, dynamic electives (Design Making and Thinking and the first Ethnic Studies class in the OUSD), plus a newly-added Enrichment Wheel of 16 six-week classes (Calligraphy, Leadership, Gender Studies, for example) in which students do not receive a grade.

I decided to see what the enrichment classes were about.

After I signed in at the office and donned my visitor’s badge, it seemed easiest to follow the only child I knew in the whole school (she called out, “Hello, Judy!”) to her Exploring Engineering class.

“We’re making a Rube Goldberg design,” math teacher Alonna Hauley told me. A few clusters of students were at work, each group tweaking its collaborative designs, which were a few days away from completion.

Hauley took me to another enrichment offering, Critical Media Literacy, taught by sixth-grade history teacher Lacy Lefkowitz. She was welcoming, despite explaining to me that some students were cutting up.

But once she started playing the rap song she had chosen to show that rap music could be both positive and negative, they were all ears. Their assignment was to write a rap song, or poem, or narrative, “about the conditions that you or others live in or about positive changes.”

Lefkowitz, who is in her seventh year at Claremont, invited me to stay for one of her Ancient History classes. “There’s a big difference between enrichment and actual classes. You will see; they (her history students) are completely quiet.” And so they were.

She used her lunch break for a weekly meeting with other sixth-grade teachers to share concerns. Several were the new hires the Richardsons had mentioned.

In the hallway, I was hailed by substitute teacher Ernie Jacob. “I’ve been subbing here for years,” he said. “There’s a big improvement. It’s more controllable.”

Meantime, the competition for middle schoolers is intense. The same week that Ronald and Reggie spoke at Peralta, that school hosted a Middle School Information Night at which parents met with representatives of various middle schools, both public and private.

Later in the month, fourth- and fifth-grade parents were invited to a “Claremont Mix and Mingle” held at a private home. Lefkowitz also is part of a team of sixth-grade teachers and parents reaching out to Emerson and Potential Claremont students and their parents crowd the school’s gym for an open house forum held in November.

/JUDITH DONER BERNE

Piedmont.

Claremont also held an Open House forum on a Saturday afternoon which an estimated 200 parents and children attended. They had a full hour to direct questions to a panel of teachers, parents and students before touring the school.

One questioner asked how much instruction actually goes on in the classroom.

From teachers: “There may be a few disruptions. They’re 11 years old. You can’t be frustrated about the things that go on in middle school. A quiet classroom is not always the ideal classroom. The ideal classroom is when the kids are engaged.”

From students: “I feel we get enough (instruction), except for PE where there is a lot of disruption. The stronger teachers know how to approach the class.”

Another questioner requested advice from kids and parents on how to make middle school less scary to the fifth-graders in the audience.

From students: “Don’t be afraid to ask for help. Make as many friends as you can. Join the clubs.”

From parents: “I encourage my kids to advocate for themselves. This is my kid’s middle school experience, not mine. Remember your middle school experience. You don’t have to protect them, just guide

KEEP THE ROCKRIDGE LIBRARY VIBRANT

A note from FORL board member Sarah Washburn, on the importance of the Rockridge Branch Library

Dear Friend, Thank you for visiting the Rockridge Public Library this past year. Thank you for checking out a book, or for enjoying a DVD; for encouraging your teen to study in the Teen Zone, or for singing and laughing with your child during storytime; for finding a cozy spot to read the newspaper, or for using the free Wi-Fi; for receiving advice from a lawyer, or for logging on to a library computer and getting tech help when you needed it. We're glad you found what you needed at the library.

While this may not describe how you've used the library, it tells a story of how your neighbors have benefited from the rich resources our local library provides. This past year, donations to the Friends of the Rockridge Library bolstered programs that connect our community to information, enrichment, and fun. Community support enables the Rockridge Public Library to continue offering resources and programs for everyone who walks through the library's doors.

Please help this story continue for you and your neighbors by making a donation to the Friends of the Rockridge Library. Clip and send the coupon below or visit www.FriendsoftheRockridgeLibrary.org and click on "Support the Library."

Authors' Note: As Oakland Tech approaches its Centennial in 2014-15, the PTSA publication Bulldog Bytes has been highlighting Tech alumni. Here we present a Rockridge family with deep roots at Tech.

Celebrating a 3-Generation Tech Bulldog Family

by Cathy Rosenfeld and Julie Parker

Anita Debro (formerly Anita English) graduated from Tech in 1948. Her son, Keith Debro, a long time Rockridge resident, has been a teacher at Tech since 2000. And Keith's son, Drew Debro, graduated from Tech in 2013.

Last June, Anita Debro shed tears of joy as she watched her grandson Drew take the stage to read his graduation speech. Seeing him on stage took her back to her own Tech graduation in 1948 when she was one of the graduation speakers. As she looked at the graduates, Anita remembered her classmates on stage in their purple and gold robes.

When Anita attended Tech, its population was mostly white. She was the only black student in most of her college prep classes and only the second black girl to be invited into the "Delphian Club," a club for girls with high grades and good character. Anita played on the golf team and rowed with the rowing club on Lake Merritt. While Anita feels proud that she went to Tech, she is even more proud that her son is a Tech teacher and that her grandson was chosen to speak at his graduation.

Keith Debro has been a teacher in the non-severely handicapped/special day class

The PTSA is publishing a memory book in honor of Tech's Centennial containing articles about Tech's history, photos, and reminiscences by Tech alumni and teachers/staff. We are looking for alumni. We are especially looking for 2-, 3-, 4- (or more) generation Bulldog families to interview for the book. Please get in touch: Please e-mail: otcentennialbook@gmail.com.

program at Tech for 13 years. Commenting on the connection his family has to Tech, Keith says that his son's attending the same school that his mom attended "represented a 360 degree move over several generations." Keith and his mom had the pleasure of attending Drew's plays and lacrosse games together.

A freshman at the University of Hawaii, Drew says that at times he "would have preferred not to be at the school where my dad taught... where all your teachers already know who you are." As for his grandmother having attended Tech, Drew says, "Until last spring, my grandma and I had never even compared stories about Tech, but it sure was an interesting conversation when we did!" During an interview with his grandma for the student-created play 99 Years, Drew learned that she was the second black "Delphian" and was in the archery club. Drew says, "I am proud to be a Tech alum because of the exemplary diversity that you can find at Tech. Everyone is welcome."

As she watched Drew step onto the stage to give his graduation speech, Anita was calm, knowing he would do well since he had won first place in OUSD's Martin Luther King, Jr. Oratorical Contest six of the past seven years! But when he started speaking, Anita almost "fell off my chair," because his speech was about her! She says she will never forget that day. The Debro family is large and close, and one of the many things they share is their pride in being a three-generation Tech family.

First published in the October 2013 on-line issue of the Tech Bulldog Bytes blog: <http://oaklandtech.com/staff/blog/2013/10/28/bulldog-bytes-october-2013>. Find more about Tech at <http://oaklandtech.com/staff/>.

each other easily if needed (individually or as a group). You can register as a Neighborhood Watch group or not: this is up to your group.

To start a Neighborhood Watch group or learn more about them, call Neighborhood Services Coordinator Patricia Rose: 510/238-6822 (prose@oaklandnet.com).

Essential steps:

- Get as many neighbors to participate as you can (whatever number that is);
- Collect e-mail addresses and create a shared list everyone has access to and create a phone tree (in case cells and e-mail are down and you need to share information quickly); and
- Get together periodically to get to know each other – a few times a year is great. Some groups only meet once a year and say that works.

Best advice of the night: DON'T get together to discuss crime. When crime rates fall, so will your group's motivation to stay active. Instead, get together to talk about... anything you want. Disaster preparedness? Volunteering as a group? How to make your street prettier? The Oscars? Have fun – seriously. Make sure there is lots of dessert...

A Final Thought: If you already are part of an organized neighborhood group or are starting one, please e-mail info@rockridge.org to let us know: the RCPC Public Safety Working Group wants to track actions we take as neighbors or community-wide to discourage criminal activity. If you can help us collect data on Rockridge's response to see if we can correlate it with improved results, e-mail us at info@rockridge.org.

Land Use Committee

allowed to convert to full-scale restaurant use with no public input and no conditions, other than any that might have been imposed via the previous use permit.

RCPC thinks the idea of use permits never expiring, and for a single storefront site to have a "closet" full of different, non-conforming use permits, any one of which may be used when a new tenant comes in, defeats the purpose of having use permits at all. The idea of a use permit is that a use might be acceptable, if appropriate conditions were attached to the use.

Allowing a generic restaurant use permit issued years earlier to remain in effect when the type of restaurant and the surrounding conditions may have undergone major changes makes little sense as a way to protect the community. RCPC will be talking to groups in other CN-1 areas of the city to see if we can reach consensus on trying to convince the city to update this outdated zoning provision.

Letters to the Editor

The Rockridge News welcomes letters to the editor. Your name, address, phone number, e-mail address and city/neighborhood must be included for verification. Only your name will appear with your letter. Letters may be edited for clarity and brevity at the editor's discretion. Views expressed in any letter are the writer's own, and may not necessarily be shared by the editor, or by RCPC.

PUBLICIZING PATROL INFORMATION EDITOR:

Some of the e-mails about the patrols came my way. The e-mails listed the hours that the cars will patrol. This information should never be revealed. The majority of car thefts in our neighborhood occur in the middle of the night. Twenty-four hour random patrols are necessary.

— Sally Williams

PATROL FUND ORGANIZER PAUL LIU RESPONDS:

Patrol hours needed to be listed in the contracts and generally known so people would know what they were signing up for. However, actual patrol hours may vary, based on evolving need.

Children's Hospital Expansion Plans Seen as More Neighborhood Friendly City Planners Seem to Hew to a Stricter Line

by Robert Brokl

Expansion plans for Children's Hospital and Research Center Oakland (CHRCO) have taken a turn for the better. The organization and its architects have adjusted the preliminary plans in ways viewed by the community as improvements.

In the latest plans, the heliport would remain south of 52nd on the new Link Building; the entrance to the parking garage would be from MLK Jr. Way and not Dover Street; and several residences owned by CHRCO would be relocated rather than demolished, or have modifications but retain their appearance from the street. Fifty-third Street would retain a residential feel and Dover may be closed to all but bike traffic.

These changes affirm the importance of a thriving neighborhood next to the hospital. More modifications and commitments are necessary, but this is progress.

Yet to be determined is the fate of the iconic "Holdout House" at 52nd Street and MLK, whose previous owner refused to sell. CHRCO may move this house to the easterly end of 53rd Street, near two other relocated residences from 52nd Street.

For most of the public, the brick wing of the hospital – the Baby Hospital from 1926 – has only been visible from the Hwy. 24 on-ramp. And while the 160-year-old magnolia, a remnant of the McElrath mansion, would be cut down, the bays and courtyard in the proposed new entrance to the hospital would be a revelation to patients and public alike.

If only planning staff were exhibiting the same openness as CHRCO. Exhaustive new research was generated regarding the magnolia, but planning staff have so far disregarded neighbors' requests, joined by the state Office of Historic Preservation, to analyze the entire study area as part of the draft EIR to assess potential impacts and mitigations.

Outstanding issues include:

- CHRCO may redesign the cinder-block wall of their surface parking lot west of MLK (they're open to the possibility) and the "park" at 52nd and MLK. However, Councilmember Kalb's office needs to be involved in discussions of the park.

- Traffic in neighborhoods is a planning concern. We will be analyzing the potential traffic as part of the EIR in the transportation section. However, city planners say increased traffic does not materially impair the historic significance of a building or a neighborhood, per Oakland's CEQA Thresholds of Significance.

- Staff also opposes a cul-de-sac at

Corner detail of the original Baby's Hospital building on the grounds of Children's Hospital. /COURTESY ROBERT BROKL

53rd and Dover, even before the traffic analysis.

Next steps include release of the DEIR and further refinement of CHRCO plans.

For more information, contact planner Heather Klein at 510/238-3659 or e-mail hklein@oaklandnet.com

Afterwards, I spoke to Lisa Cloud, who bypassed Claremont a couple of years ago to enroll her son at Oakland School for the Arts. Now, as she makes the rounds looking for the best place for twin daughters who attend Peralta, she had a very different take. “I’m very happy with what I see here,” she said.

“It’s going in a very positive direction,” seconded Terrell Richard, who has a seventh-grade daughter and a sixth-grade niece at Claremont as well as a fourth-grader at Chabot.

“My wife went to Chabot; my wife went to Claremont; and my wife went to Tech,” he said. “I went to Tech. We believe what is happening at Tech is going to happen here.”

Private Guards; Public Ground

keeping your house safe? I'm part of the neighborhood."

Even the crowdfunding organizers concede that private patrols are merely a Band-Aid approach. The original plan was to try the patrols for four months, starting in early November. Yet the initial campaigns raised enough for a year.

When they kicked off the effort, organizers said they were interested in collecting and disseminating data, but they've stopped short of a clear commitment. Paul Liu, who started the first campaign in Lower Rockridge, was quoted in November's Rockridge News as saying he'd "...do what I can in terms of data." The article also quoted VMA General Manager Elizabeth Caprini: "I don't keep track of (crime) statistics."

If VMA won't collect data, who will? How will it be shared and how will success be measured? How will funders make a decision whether to continue after the four-month trial? Will anyone monitor how this experiment is affecting adjacent neighborhoods?

The increase in crime is not limited to our ZIP codes, after all. Ariel Bierbaum, an eight-year Rockridge resident, worries that hiring guards here may simply push robberies and burglaries elsewhere. This raises competing definitions of community. "I consider my community to be not just my immediate neighborhood, but Oakland as a whole. Decreased crime here at the expense of other neighborhoods is not a solution I'm comfortable with," she says.

"There are other neighborhoods in Oakland where people are truly unsafe," notes Jonathan Osler, who is raising a family in Lower Rockridge. "My perception of my own safety is linked to their daily struggle to survive. We need to start investing beyond our own ZIP code if we want to build healthy and safe communities."

An informal group of neighbors has been organizing to make sure the whole community knows about the patrols, to survey people on their views, to ensure that the results are transparent, and to develop alternative ways to fight crime that we can all get behind.

There are many short- and long-term options: installing street barriers to block easy freeway access or putting cameras by on-ramps; boosting neighborhood watch; improving street lighting; increasing foot traffic in structured ways; pressuring smart phone manufacturers to build their products with instant "kill" switches; drafting a ballot measure to expand the number of trained police officers. The Rockridge Neighborhood Crime Prevention Council (NCPC) has been exploring some of those strategies, and the Bushrod/Shattuck area also has a proactive NCPC. A good piece of news is that burglaries there are down 35 percent so far this year, and robberies are down 6 percent, according to OPD statistics.

We agree that crowdfunding is a powerful tool and can be used in many ways to bring us together. For example, the national group GunByGun (<https://www.gunbygun.org/oakland-gun-buyback>) organizes crowdfunding campaigns for gun buybacks. Oakland's Youth UpRising is hosting one on December 14 (www.youthuprising.org/get-involved/gun-buy-back).

If you'd like to help make Rockridge—and all of Oakland—safer for everyone, e-mail us: saferoaklandforall@gmail.com.

Laura Counts, Nicole Aruda and Susette Min are active Lower Rockridge residents raising their children here. Between the three of them, they've lived in the neighborhood for 41 years.

Paul Liu and Other Patrol Organizers Respond

responses coordinated by Paul Liu

The opinion piece above contains a number of mischaracterizations:

Degree of Participation

The original crowdfunding campaign was launched with the support of many neighbors. We held a neighborhood block meeting following the daytime armed robbery of two of our neighbors, and all expressed interest in a private security patrol. A similar discussion took place on a neighboring block's e-mail list and the response there was also very supportive. That several hundred households subsequently joined in the campaigns indicates to us a deep desire to take concrete actions towards improving public safety in our neighborhood. As the OPD has stated, "Any help that we can receive to reduce crime in our city is good for all of us."

Patrols as the Only Solution

Security patrols are not an "either-or" proposition. There is no reason not to look into other options for reducing crime as well. We welcome any and all efforts to reduce crime in our neighborhood and throughout Oakland.

Likelihood of Profiling

The concerns of racial profiling are unfounded. VMA Security Group is an African-American-owned, Oakland-based firm that has been retained by the Rockridge merchants' association and many Oakland businesses. Over 95 percent of VMA's employees are Oakland residents, the great majority of African-American or Latino background, and the company has stated that they do not and will not racially profile.

Analyzing Patrol Effectiveness

Using crime data from the OPD-recommended website, early results suggest that burglaries and robberies in Lower Rockridge have declined by 50 percent relative to what would have been expected absent the patrols. This is based on burglaries and robberies in Lower Rockridge before and after the patrols, compared to other similar neighborhoods in Oakland and Berkeley (Elmwood,

Scenic Streets

Scenic Streets is seeking an additional sponsor for one older receptacle in front of Cost-U-Less Insurance opposite the DMV offices. The volunteer group purchased a can with its own funds last year. It has dramatically reduced littering in front of the agency, but the insurance company's headquarters has declined to fund the $500 artwork upgrade.

Ayala Park, a pocket park at Ayala Avenue and 57th Street, suffered extensive damage during November's strong and sustained winds.

Created by long-time Rockridge resident John Wagers, the park is maintained by Wagers and Ayala Avenue residents. Resident Constantine Cherkashyn photographed the damage and helped with cleanup.

I want to tell you how thankful I am this year. My business in Rockridge has grown every year. I just went over the $100,000,000 mark in sales of homes in Rockridge alone. I have sold and closed over 130 transactions in Rockridge and since I live and work here, it makes this success even better.

One of the biggest joys is how the RCPC News has changed since I moved here in 1987. In 1987, no one ever mentioned a public school in Rockridge. I found this fascinating. And now, after all of these long years and tireless efforts of many neighborhood families, it seems that every issue is full of news about Peralta, Chabot, Claremont and Oakland Tech. My son is senior at Oakland Tech and I could not be more proud of him and the other students there. He accomplished so much at a great and often underappreciated school. It has given him every possible chance to succeed. He will be able to land anywhere in the world with excellent social skills and a good education. There is so much to be thankful for living here in Rockridge. I am almost speechless.
